UNCLE SAM HOLDS THE CHECKBOOK.

ITALY may make a front to satisfy the Italian people that the government is a much abused power in the hands of the allies but the fact, nevertheless, remains that she must resign herself to whatever the United States may dictate. An open rupture or an alliance with Germany at this late day would bring about antagonism that would count more severely against Italy than any other country. Italy is in the hands of the United States which can make her own terms without offending the sensibilities of the people who are so lustily clamoring for possession of a territory which was conceded by secret treaty under the stress of war when it seemed as though Germany was bound to overrun the European continent. If an adjudication of this secret treaty business applied exclusively to Italy it would not amount to much, for none would suffer from taking the heel of the peninsula from the moribund Austria and donating it to the present applicant. But behind the principle of recognizing the secret pacts by which peoples and territory would be transferred is one that more vitally affects the United States with a cunning rival whose chief ambition is to emerge from the Orient and enter into a world's conquest to relieve the congestion in its own confines. This is what President Wilson aims to checkmate.

No delegation of outside powers directly concerned is more interested in the Adriatic controversy than the Chinese, for there is a point of curious similarity between the quarrel of Italy and Jugo-Slavia and that of China and Japan over the Chinese province of Shantung. There is also this difference—Italy is struggling to get the debatable territory she was promised by England and France to induce her to enter the war herself. Japan is fighting to get admittedly Chinese territory as a reward for letting China enter the war. Japan bases her case on the secret agreement made by France, England, Russia and Italy on February 17, 1917, that they would support Japan's claim at the prospective peace conference to the German islands north of the equator in the Pacific and to Chinese territory in Shantung from which Germany has been ousted. Evidence of these promises given to Japan is contained in the hitherto unpublished diplomatic notes which are a part of the records of the peace conference. Neither Wilson nor the Chinese knew of the existence of these secret agreements when they came to Paris. The disclosure was first made to Wilson at a meeting of the council when the question of mandatory system as suggested by the American president was first under discussion. It was then proposed that the German islands be disposed of by placing them under mandate.

In an awkward moment Lloyd George remarked that an arrangement of a definite character had been reached with reference to the islands. Wilson inquired what it was and was informed that Japan had been promised by England, France, Italy and Russia two years before that she should have outright all the islands north of the equator. This disclosure brought the show down and placed the cards on the table with the result that Wilson insisted that secret treaties should be abrogated and that the subject issues be left to the determination of the peace council. To sanction the extension of Italian rule to the Adriatic shores would tacitly admit the right of Japan to come dangerously close to our shores and bring the yellow peril to our very doors.

Aside from the principle involved Italy is not in any position to resist, for her economic life depends on the indulgence of the United States to which she is indebted for advances of both money and materials essential to her regeneration. Uncle Sam has the checkbook of the world, and when he refuses to sign, debtor nations will dance to the music of Yankee Doodle.

MAKING THE MINER SWEAT.

IN ADDITION to the many exasperating elements introduced in mining to hamper that industry the administration has found a new excuse for adding to the costs of the production of industrial metals. This is through adoption of the new freight rates ordered by the railroad administration which appear directly leveled at the mines of the west. While the general increase was said to be only 25 per cent it is said that the actual advance on smelter products amounted to 170 per cent. In a complaint filed by the smelters it was recited that while the market prices of most articles of commerce had increased greatly as a result of the war, the United States had fixed the price of copper products at a much less figure than had been the ruling market quotation and the cost of the production of smelter projects had also been advanced more than 70 per cent. Only a small percentage of the ores of Southern Nevada are subject to regulation by the smelter trust since they are nearly all treated by the cyanide process which eliminates transportation and smelter charges through reduction of ores at home in local mills. This is another advantage of Divide investments.

CLIPPED AND CREDITED.

We don't believe a contemporary's statement that Larry Sherman is fighting to save his face. Did you ever see his photo?—Charleston News and Courier.

We do not know what it contains when a loving cup is passed among prohibitionists, but we recall that we never heard a crowd of them around it sing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."—Detroit News.

A man will give the tight skirt as an example of the intellectual inferiority of woman and then go out and look at himself in the mirror trying on various derby hats without cracking a smile.—Chicago Post.

The vital importance of concluding the peace treaty at once and without any more speeches than necessary is becoming so evident that we are very glad, after all, that President Wilson concluded not to put any senators on our commission.—Ohio State Journal.

ROOT OF DARTZA WEED SURE PNEUMONIA CURE

During the first epidemic of the influenza and the pneumonia that followed in this section with many fatalities, the doctors of this city tried everything that was recommended by other physicians and through the treatises in the medical journals. In spite of all efforts throughout the world pneumonia influenza has been one of the most fatal diseases that the physicians have combated in the history of medical science. The results are best known to the people. It was during the peak load of the epidemic that the attention of Dr. Krebs of Carson was called to the use of a root or herb used by the Indians. (He has asked that he be not mentioned in this article, but the credit belongs to him). As some astonishing results through the use of this herb were credited, he hunted up the Indians and secured some of the roots.

He learned through inquiry that they steeped or stewed the roots and then drank the tea. In one case the entire Indian family was down with pneumonia. An old Indian went to the mountains and securing the roots made the decoction and within a few days pneumonia had disappeared. The family recovered.

The herb has been used for coughs and colds by the Indians for years. It was dried and hung in the camps and used as occasion demanded, not alone by the medicine man but by the families.

Experiments followed, not alone by Dr. Krebs, but by other physicians. Some of the results have been almost astounding. In cases it has absolutely proved a specific for the dread disease. Where used under the doctor's administration in the form of an extract it has absolutely prevented the complication of pneumonia. One physician has gone so far as to state that he believes this the most remarkable discovery in years, and that he is convinced through results in practice, that it is a specific in influenza and other cases resulting from heavy colds. In no instance has it failed. Samples of his Indian medicine known as Dartza, sent to the coast physicians have resulted in equally startling beneficial effects. Locally it has been used freely and in every instance immediate benefits have resulted.

The root is described as being something of the form and shape of a carrot. Upon analysis it is stated to contain eight distinct medicinal properties, each beneficial in the treatment of lung, fever and cold conditions. A general demand has been made for this herb and the question of supply is one that will have to be considered, says the Carson News.

The matter was discussed on account of the influenza conditions in several sections of this state. This specific can be secured in limited amounts in this city, and physicians will be advised of its distribution by writing to the druggists in this city.

This is not an advertising dodge of any class or kind. It was suggested that the matter be given the public after the exhaustive experiments made by the Carson physicians and is made public on such advice. Private individuals in this city can testify as the worth of Dartza.

The use of this drug was not made public earlier as those carrying on the experiments believed that thorough tests should be applied in actual cases. It is after this work has been performed and extracts made that publication is fully made.

This Indian medicine is one of the secrets of the Washoe tribe. For years it has been held in their tribe and the Plutes only came to its use in the past few years, or since the tribes have been on a friendly status.

Not long ago Captain Pete of the Washoes, made a trip to this city to see the Governor. He believed that the Indians should receive some benefit from their divulging the secret of the tribe to the white men. The governor listened to the story of Captain Pete, but owing to the fact that the experiments were being conducted by the medical fraternity, and not in the state hands, he did not offer much encouragement to the Washoe chief.

While complete analysis of the root have not been carried out, further laboratory experiments are being undertaken. It is a certainty that something new and extremely beneficial has been discovered.

There really ought to be a law prohibiting a woman from wearing a red kimono. She looks too much like the commander of the Russian Battalion of Death.

With bone-dry prohibition there should be a demand for a revival of that old thriller, "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Remember, Joe Morgan and the ch-e-l-d?
